The National Theatre Foundation is an equal opportunity employer committed to practicing and promoting equity, diversity, inclusion, and anti-racism in our operations and in our programs. In particular, NTF seeks a racially diverse staff team to mirror the diversity of the DC metropolitan area.

ABOUT THE NATIONAL THEATRE FOUNDATION (NTF)

Since its opening in 1835, just blocks from the White House, The National Theatre (The National) has premiered landmark American musicals, including West Side Story in 1957; hosted presidential inaugural balls; and played a significant role in important national events. Deeply steeped in the history of the United States, it was at The National that President Lincoln watched the Washington debut of John Wilkes Booth in the title role of Shakespeare's Richard III. The original theatre was reconstructed several times in the 19th century following a number of fires. The current building had its first performance in 1923 and in the early 1980s, the theater underwent a major renovation. The refurbished theater opened in 1984, with President and Mrs. Reagan attending a gala benefit performance of David Merrick's 42nd Street. Simply put, few theatres in America have the history, prestige, and continuing vitality of The National Theatre.

The National has welcomed almost every major theatrical star in United States history. It strives to be the “Stage for the Nation,” by presenting the highest caliber of performing arts genres, ranging from Broadway productions to popular entertainment and award-winning educational programming. The National’s 2022-2023 season includes nine Broadway productions along with our three primary community education programs: (1) Saturday Morning Live! At The National, a series of free educational programs for children; (2) Community Stage Connections, a free program that brings theatrical and musical performances throughout the District of Columbia and surrounding communities that experience barriers to accessing the arts; and (3) Teens Behind the Scenes, which provides DMV-area (District of Columbia, Maryland, and Virginia) high school students interested in the performing arts with free tickets to Broadway productions and talk-backs with theatre professionals. Given the diversity of the DMV area, a particular focus of our community education programs is engaging children and youth from racially minoritized and economically disadvantaged communities. During the pandemic, all of our programs pivoted to a virtual online format. We are now beginning to transition back to in-person performances.

The National has two performance venues—the main theatre, with a capacity of approximately 1,700, and the Helen Hayes Gallery, an intimate 125-seat performance space ideal for educational programming and smaller performances. The National also has an extensive collection of archival materials, including playbills, photographs, articles, and posters. Plans for proper storage, access, digitization, and display are currently under development.

While its name may suggest otherwise, The National does not receive government funding. The historic building is privately owned and leased to The National Theatre Foundation (NTF)—a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization established in 1974 and governed by a 15-member Board of Directors. Sandy “Charles” Wilkes serves as Chairman of the Board. NTF’s fiscal year 2022 operating budget is more than $950,000, with approximately 75 percent coming from contributed revenue and 25 percent in earned revenue. This does not reflect capital improvement funds, with recent annual expenditures of $500,000. NTF is responsible for community engagement, oversees educational programs, and preserves The National and its extensive archives. Among other responsibilities, NTF’s staff manages The National’s relationship with National Theatre Group (NTG). NTG is an affiliate of Nederlander National Markets, which is responsible for the “Broadway at the National” season each year. NTG/Nederlander National Markets is the sole presenter on the Main Stage.

NTF’s strategic planning is focused on further deepening its identity, supporting NTG’s Main Stage presentations while expanding our own community engagement programs, and communicating The National’s rich history in order to distinguish The National among DC’s vibrant performing arts scene. NTF’s corresponding strategic initiatives in the coming years include bringing The National’s archives and history to the public’s attention, increasing its organizational capacity, expanding its economic model, increasing its strategic partnerships, and formulating a communication plan that tells the compelling, inspiring story of The National.
